MISSION & VALUES

Being a Leader Within the Community

 MISSION & VALUES \(/TOPICS/MISSION-VALUES\)

BY SONYA STINSON
JULY 23, 2015

The Wayne County Community College District chancellor's community commitment exemplifies the community college mission.

Curtis Ivery, chancellor of Wayne County Community College District \(http://www.wcccd.edu/\) (WCCCD), has written several books and used some of the earnings from his writings to fund scholarships for WCCCD students. That's just one expression of his personal commitment to promote what he calls the "transformational" power of education.

Ivery's most recent work, Black Fatherhood: Reclaiming Our Legacy, is co-authored with his son, Marcus Ivery. More than anything, Ivery wanted the book to proclaim the fundamental role of fatherhood in the black community: "It simply means everything," he says.

With six campuses, including one in downtown Detroit, WCCD serves more than 70,000 students. In this interview with the 21st-Century Center, Ivery talks about how, as part of its mission, the college district also serves the community at large and how he views his own position in that community.

How does the college district value its relationships within the community, and how do you view your role as chancellor in helping to cultivate those relationships?

The words "community" and "community college" have always meant something pretty special to me. I don't move into the community pretending that I have all the answers, but what I've tried to do is create a sense of community ... having those who support us relate to the notion that this is their college.

As Detroit was confronted with bankruptcy a few years ago, this college was a very critical place for conversations. We had a number of thought leaders come in and speak at our various locations. Being a multicampus [college] — we're in six different locations throughout Wayne County — we had a chance to involve people in ways that others couldn't.

When you are in an urban center, you have a large uninsured population, so we played a critical role in terms of getting information out about preventive health care, not using the hospital as your choice for primary care. We put on a number of clinics to help people be more informed about taking care of themselves.

Literacy is a very important issue. My wife [Ola, a retired public school teacher] has established a Bookworm Club that she operates with the college district. We go out to read to kids in daycares and schools, and we invite young kids in on the weekends. We have a bookworm mascot, and we give away books free to the kids when they come in. We've been doing that now for 10 years or more.

We also have large reading fairs that probably serve somewhere around 10,000 students a year. It's part of our early childhood initiative, because we believe that the earlier we reach our young people, the better off we are. So we are trying to get books in their hands as early as possible.

Your new book looks at the role of black fathers as role models to their sons. As a successful leader in higher education, do you also see yourself as a role model to the broader African-American community?

I don't give a lot of thought to whether I'm a role model — and I know it's cliché to say that. It's more about how I want to be remembered.

I'm reminded of what Abraham Lincoln said when someone asked him about how he wanted to be remembered. He said, "I want to be able to simply get up in the morning, look in the mirror and like what I see." That's kind of where I am. I want to make sure that I've done something positive, particularly for my children and other young people. I think they are counting on us.

What do you want your legacy to be?

That I was a fierce fighter for the nobility of education. It's so important that we give everyone access to [education]. Education is transformational.

On my desk, I have a picture of my great-great grandfather and his father, and I have occasion to look at it every day I'm in the office. It reminds me of the importance of the responsibility that I have — to ensure that their lives matter, that their dreams matter. My grandfather made a comment to me once that he wanted me to be his dream. The dreams that he couldn't accomplish, he wanted me to accomplish.

It's not about dollars and cents. It's being a champion for the dignity of people.

CAMP INFINITY

WCCCD's School of Continuing Education and Workforce Development and the Mary Ellen Stempfle University Center - Center for Learning Technologies in Partnership with The Michigan Council of Women in Technology (MCWT) presented Camp Infinity for girls interested in engineering and technology. The camps was also sponsored by the Ford Motor Company.

District Police Authority

Lost and Found Property Service

WCCCD Police Authority is the District's repository for lost and found items on campus

What our alumni are saying about WCCCD...

“Wayne County Community College was a great experience the teacher took time with you after class and made sure you understood the materials. I would recommend Wayne county because of the smaller classes and the nice knowledgeable instructors”.

Geraldine Barnes Administrative Assistant at Detroit Area Agency on Aging, Administrative Assistant at Detroit Area Agency on Aging - WCCCD 1986 – 1991, A.A.S.

“WCCCD offers great education and yet affordable to anyone. Great professors, small classes, and convenient locations make this school attractive to many students.”

Lead Accountant at GE Global Operations - Headquarters
WCCCD 2002 – 2005, Associate's Degree

“Wayne County Community College District was the vehicle that allowed me to make up the lost and unfocused years of high school. It put me in position to graduate with honors and go onto University of Michigan and later Drexel University where I majored in Electrical Engineering and Computer Science. The instructors were second-to-none.”

Work-Study Program

As we prepare for the new academic year, the work-study is diligently working to secure our off-site partnership success. Most of our partners return back to the program by recommitting to a yearly agreement with the District to provide off campus locations for them to gain work experience.

We are excited to welcome back six of our valued partnerships including Matrix Human Services, Tuskegee Airmen Museum, YMCA, The Detroit Parent Network, Ecorse Public Schools, and the Salvation Army. With the collaboration of these partners in our work-study program, students are offered an outside opportunity to grow, connect, and achieve.

Division of Human Resources

Human Resources and Finance Interface

In today's complex organizational environment, Human Resources and Finance play key roles in ensuring the integrity of an organization. From human resource management to asset management, it is critical that these two divisions communicate processes, documents and reconcile flawlessly.

Understanding the importance of data integrity and accuracy, the two divisions, on a monthly basis, meet to assure that appropriate structures and all local, state, and federal regulations are administered.

Benefits Reconciliation

As part of the Division of Human Resources continuous audit process, we are in the midst of reconciling the second quarter of 2015 for the following benefit accounts:

- Major medical
- Optical & Dental
- Employee Assisted Program (EAP)

Web-Time Attendance Reconciliation

Weekly Attendance and personnel requisitions are reconciled with the Division of Finance and Administration to ensure accurate payroll processing:

- Budgeting
- Staffing
- Compensation
- Reporting and Transparency

IMPORTANT DATES

Retirement Celebration: August 7, 2015
Staff Pay: July 31, 2015
Faculty Pay: July 31, 2015

WEEKLY UPDATE

Happening Now

The existing network switches have been replaced with Cisco Catalyst 3850 PoE (Power over Ethernet) switches to support data, voice, and Hi-speed wireless network infrastructure. A new network design and IP address schema is being implemented at the campuses which will provide a secure and reliable network, as well as the ability to manage and separate different types of networks throughout the district. Additional wiring for both fiber optic and Ethernet cables were completed to enhance data and voice traffic.

The Cisco Catalyst 3850 Series is the next generation of enterprise-class stackable Ethernet and Multi-gigabit Ethernet access and aggregation layer switches that provide full convergence between wired and wireless on a single platform. Cisco's new Unified Access Data Plane (UADP) application-specific integrated circuit (ASIC) powers the switch and enables uniform wired-wireless policy enforcement, application visibility, flexibility and application optimization. The Cisco Catalyst 3850 Series Switches support full IEEE 802.3at Power over Ethernet Plus (PoE+), Cisco Universal Power over Ethernet (Cisco UPOE), modular and field-replaceable network modules, RJ45 and fiber-based downlink interfaces, and redundant fans and power supplies. With speeds that reach 10Gbps, the Cisco Catalyst 3850 Multi-gigabit Ethernet Switches support current and next-generation wireless speeds and standards (including 802.11ac Wave 2) on existing cabling infrastructure.

Look Ahead

Phase I of the VoIP project and the network infrastructure upgrade will continue to the Downtown Campus.

The School of Continuing Education and Workforce Development

According to the American Association of Community Colleges, Community/Continuing Education is a primary focus for community college — with community, rather than college, being the emphasis in the title. The PTEC provides an opportunity for pharmacy technicians to network, gain access to educational resources, receive industry-targeted news, and participate in the growing community of pharmacy technician education experts.

Students Assisting in the Community

Pita Arechiga, first-year WCCCD Dental Hygiene student, was shopping at Moscheck's meat market in Allen Park, when a 2 year old started choking on a piece of food and then became still. The Mom saw the student in her scrubs and handed her the still baby. Ms. Arechiga then instructed someone to call 911 and proceeded to give the baby quick movements on the back until the object was dislodged and subsequently EMS arrived. The student had just renewed her CPR two weeks ago, and was so thankful for the updated knowledge.

Nursing Department - Tips to keep healthy during the summer months.

Signs and Symptoms of Heat Stroke

Heat stroke or sometimes called "heat exhaustion" results from prolonged exposure to high temperatures and sun -- usually in combination with dehydration -- which leads to failure of the body's temperature control system. If you suspect that someone has had a heat stroke, immediately call 911 or transport the person to a hospital. While waiting for the paramedics to arrive, initiate first aid.

Try these cooling strategies:

- Fan air over the person while wetting his or her skin with water from a sponge or garden hose.
- Apply ice packs to the person's armpits, groin, neck, and back.
- Immerse the person in a shower or tub of cool water.

If response to your emergency 911 call is delayed, call the local hospital emergency room for additional instructions. Please enjoy the summer months and have a safe, happy, healthy summer.
