Catalog of Programs

A college catalog can often encompass all the information students need to know about learning at the school. Students already attending a college can use the catalog to choose courses and plan schedules for coming semesters.

Course Syllabi Review

Course syllabi are an integral part of college courses as they communicate the instructor's outline for how the course will be conducted, what the goals for the course are, course policies, and expectations. Each campus collects and reviews syllabi at the beginning of the semester to ensure that WCCCD's minimum expectations have been met.

Community Outreach

English as a Second Language instructors participated in a community outreach at the Downtown Campus. They provided information on program opportunities available at WCCCD.

New National Institute of Manufacturing

WASHINGTON, DC – U.S. Senator Gary Peters announced a new proposal to establish a National Institute of Manufacturing during his keynote address at the MForesight Manufacturing Summit in Washington, DC. Inspired by the National Institutes of Health (NIH), the institute would serve as the hub for federal manufacturing programs, promote efforts to help our workforce close the skills gap and function as the focal point for developing a national strategy focused on ensuring American manufacturing policy can rapidly respond to changes in the global marketplace. Through his visits to manufacturers across Michigan, Peters has heard about the need for a unified strategy on manufacturing to revitalize the industry and keep pace with competitors in other countries.
